

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 76

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

Last week: DJIA 46247.29 ▼ 67.98 0.15% NASDAQ 22484.07 ▼ 0.7% STOXX 600 554.52 ▲ 0.1% 10-YR. TREASURY ▼ 12/32, yield 4.185% OIL $65.72 ▲ $3.32 EURO $1.1704 YEN 149.51

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Bottomless investor appetite for U.S. corporate debt has some professionals on Wall Street worried, concerns exacerbated by two recent, sudden bankruptcies in the auto sector. A1
- ◆ Walmart is moving to confront the looming impact of artificial intelligence on its workforce after Chief Executive Doug McMillon's wake-up call about the technology last week. A1
- ◆ The Fed's return to cutting interest rates can't alone cure a stagnant jobs market, say many employers that point to other conditions that are staying their hand. A2
- ◆ Prediction-market startup Kalshi is making a play for football fans after making its name by giving political junkies a way to bet on last year's presidential election. A1
- ◆ "One Battle After Another" led the weekend domestic box office at its release, with $22.4 million in movie-house receipts. B2
- ◆ Zillow advanced toward its first year in the black since 2012, preparing to report an annual profit helped by higher revenue and a cap on fixed costs. B1
- ◆ Baidu plans to begin operating fully driverless robotaxis in Dubai as it attempts to replicate its success in Wuhan, China, in an overseas market. B3
- ◆ Starting next year Volvo plans to increase output of its XC60 sport-utility vehicle at its Ridgeville, S.C., factory after Trump's tariffs made domestic production more attractive. B1

World-Wide

- ◆ Trump and congressional leaders are headed into dramatic last-minute talks just as Republicans and Democrats are bracing for a government shutdown that could also involve a fresh round of firings of federal workers. A1
- ◆ A gunman fired on worshippers at a Mormon church in Michigan and set the building ablaze, killing at least four and wounding several. A3
- ◆ Oregon political and business leaders urged Trump to stop "perpetuating outdated narratives" about Portland and not deploy federal troops to the city. A3
- ◆ Trump plans to join an unusual gathering of senior U.S. military commanders that Defense Secretary Hegseth will convene Tuesday. A5
- ◆ New York City Mayor Eric Adams halted his bid for reelection, narrowing the field in a hotly contested race to run the nation's largest city. A3
- ◆ Russia launched more than 600 drones and dozens of missiles at Ukraine on Saturday night and Sunday morning in one of the largest aerial attacks of the war. A9
- ◆ The Trump administration asked the Supreme Court for a final ruling on the president's bid to end the practice of granting citizenship to anyone born on U.S. soil. A3
- ◆ The Taliban freed a U.S. citizen from an Afghan prison, weeks after they said they had reached an agreement with U.S. envoys on a prisoner exchange. A9
- ◆ Died: Russell M. Nelson, 101, LDS church leader. A5

CONTENTS	Markets..... B8
Arts in Review..... A15	Opinion..... A17-19
Business & Finance B2-3	Personal Journal A13-14
Business News..... B5	Sports..... A16
Crossword..... A16	Technology..... B4
Heard on Street..... B8	U.S. News..... A2-6
Market Data..... B6	World News..... A8-9

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Europe Beats Back U.S. Surge to Win Ryder Cup

ERIC S. LESSER/EPA SHUTTERSTOCK

VICTORY ROAR: Shane Lowry, holding trophy, celebrates after Team Europe held off an American comeback to win the Ryder Cup on Sunday at the Bethpage Black course in Farmingdale, N.Y. It was Team Europe's first Cup on U.S. soil since 2012. A16

Trump, Lawmakers Set Talks On Averting Federal Shutdown

Meeting comes two days before deadline as Democrats press funding for health

WASHINGTON—President Trump and congressional leaders are headed into dramatic last-minute talks just

By Siobhan Hughes, Robbie Gramer and Katy Stech Ferek

as Republicans and Democrats are bracing for a government shutdown by mid-week that could also involve a fresh round of firings of federal workers.

A White House meeting is scheduled for Monday, ahead of an expected redo of a Senate vote that will determine whether Congress will keep the government funded beyond Tuesday.

House Republicans narrowly passed a bill this month that would fund the government into late November and add millions for security for lawmakers and other officials, but Democrats blocked that measure in the Senate and are seeking bipartisan negotiations on healthcare funding.

The government will partially shut down Wednesday at 12:01 a.m. if Congress can't pass a short-term spending patch.

The meeting will include House Speaker Mike Johnson (R., La.) and Senate Majority Leader John Thune (R., S.D.) along with their Democratic counterparts, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer and House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries, both of New York.

Republicans cast it as a last chance for Democrats to get on board with the GOP's proposal for a seven-week funding patch, while Democrats said Republicans needed to offer something in return.

Both sides say they have no plans to give ground, raising the prospect of a shutdown for the first time since Trump's first term, when funding lapsed for more than a month in a dispute over border-wall money.

"The ball is in their court," Thune said of the Democrats on NBC, casting the resolution as a noncontroversial measure to buy time for negotiating a longer-term government funding deal in coming months. "They're trying to hijack it and load up all this liberal, special-interest stuff."

Jeffries said he hoped a government shutdown could be avoided.

"Our view going into the

Please turn to page A4

The Rise of America's Young Socialists

For many on the forefront of the far left, the misery of the 2008 financial crisis left a lasting impression

By JOSHUA CHAFFIN

Well before Lehman Brothers collapsed and capitalism quaked, Gabe Tobias had an arresting view of what would become the global financial crisis.

It was in Santa Ana, Calif., where Tobias was working as a community organizer after finishing college in 2006. He was meant to be advising low-income families on healthcare.

Soon, though, his work changed. Acorn, the nonprofit that employed him, began to see rashes of families, particularly Hispanic immigrants, complaining that they were being forced out of their homes. The culprit was adjustable-rate mortgages they had signed up for but scarcely understood.

"It was devastating," Tobias recalled. "They had everything locked up in their homes. They had nothing else."

In the ensuing months, he would become familiar with unscrupulous mortgage brokers' tricks of the trade—using multiple sets of paperwork to mislead customers, enlisting community leaders to sell dubious products to those who spoke little English, and more. At an early age, he came to a sobering conclusion: "There's an industry that's set up to suck money out of working people."

In June, Tobias' friend, Zohran Mamdani, 33, shocked the world when he handily won

Please turn to page A12

◆ Mayor Eric Adams quits New York race.... A3

USA250 • CAPITALISM

The Story of the World's Greatest Economy R1-24

Think You're Ready for Greenland? It's Not Quite Ready for You

Travelers flocking to the Arctic island find adjusting to 'Greenland Maybe Time' is hard

By ALISON SIDER

Getting to Greenland is easy now. After that, all bets are off.

Greenland has been trying to attract more tourists, and its push paid dividends this summer. New flights from the U.S. made the Arctic island more accessible than ever. Geopolitical intrigue fueled curiosity. Greenland saw a 16% increase in international air passengers this year through July.

First-time visitors have been awestruck by pristine fjords and magnificent glaciers, gushing over stunning, untouched landscape. But they've also returned with some advice for would-be travelers: Set aside a few buffer days after your scheduled return. Actually, make it a week. And buy travel insurance.

Hotels are packed. Getting from one city to another requires a trip on a small plane or boat, as roads are scarce. Travelers have spent nights sleeping in the airport lounge. Nuuk's new airport has been so understaffed that it sparked rumors all the screeners went hunting. Locals warn visitors that the island runs on GMT, or Greenland Maybe Time.

Babu Paruchuri and his

Please turn to page A12

Walmart CEO Issues Wake-Up Call on AI

By SARAH NASSAUER AND CHIP CUTTER

BENTONVILLE, Ark.—Walmart executives aren't sugarcoating the message: Artificial intelligence will wipe out some jobs and reshape the company's workforce.

Now the country's largest private employer is making plans to confront that reality.

"It's very clear that AI is going to change literally every job," Chief Executive Doug McMillon said last week in one of the most pointed assessments to date from a big-company CEO on AI's likely impact on employment.

His remarks reflect a rapid shift from just months ago in how business leaders discuss the potential human cost of

Credit Markets Are Hot, But Froth Is Worry

Auto-related bankruptcies trigger investor fears on corporate debt

By MATT WIRZ AND SAM GOLDFARB

U.S. credit markets are running hot—maybe too hot.

Investors are gobbling up corporate debt like it is going out of style—even though the rewards, by some measures, are lower than they have been in decades. The frothy mood has some on Wall Street worried that the market is priced for perfection and ripe for a fall.

That is why any bad news is touching a nerve and raising the question of whether something more profound is ailing American borrowers. Two sudden bankruptcies in the auto world—of a subprime lender and a parts supplier—have triggered those conversations among bond investors and analysts.

So far, there is no sign of wider fallout—and each of those situations had unique characteristics that don't point to broader trends. But combined with other challenges, such as persistent inflation and rising defaults in a hot Wall Street segment known as "private credit," it is enough to give longtime traders pause.

"There's been a very positive investment environment for a long time, with a large amount of money and a lot of optimism," said Howard Marks, co-chairman of investment firm Oaktree Capital Management, which specializes in credit investing. He said that can lead to high pricing and declining quality. "The worst loans are

Please turn to page A2