

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

TUESDAY, AUGUST 12, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 36

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 43975.09 ▼ 200.52 0.45% NASDAQ 21385.40 ▼ 0.3% STOXX 600 546.76 ▼ 0.1% 10-YR. TREAS. ▲ 3/32, yield 4.271% OIL $63.96 ▲ $0.08 GOLD $3,353.10 ▼ $86.00 EURO $1.1617 YEN 148.15

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ Skydance's Paramount has struck a $7.7 billion deal with TKO Group for exclusive media rights for all Ultimate Fighting Championship matches in the U.S. B1

◆ Ford said it would spend $2 billion to overhaul a Louisville, Ky., factory to build a new line of affordable, high-tech EV pickups the automaker aims to launch in 2027. B1

◆ U.S. stocks fell while gold prices continued to slide after Trump's declaration that there would be no tariff on gold bars. The S&P 500 and Nasdaq both dipped 0.3% while the Dow lost 0.5%. B11

◆ A steady increase in municipal-bond supply, coupled with the survival of their tax benefit in Trump's spending bill, is making the securities more attractive to investors. B1

◆ Startup Vulcan Elements said it raised $65 million in a new funding round to increase production of the rare-earth magnets crucial to everything from drones to electric vehicles. B1

◆ AMC narrowed its quarterly loss as revenue jumped, fueled by a rebound in the box office and the chain's emphasis on premium moviegoing experiences. B3

◆ Orsted shares fell 30% after it halted plans to sell a stake in a U.S. offshore wind project and proposed a rights issue that could raise $9.4 billion. B3

◆ Shares of video-sharing site Rumble climbed after the company reported its second-quarter results and said it intended to make an all-stock bid to buy AI cloud-computing group Northern Data for about $1.17 billion. B3

World-Wide

◆ Trump said he would deploy National Guard troops to Washington, D.C., and place the city's police department under federal control, launching an unprecedented effort to take charge of the nation's capital. A1, A4

◆ Trump said he plans to nominate E.J. Antoni, the chief economist at the Heritage Foundation and a critic of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, to lead the agency. A3

◆ Expectations in Russia are running high ahead of Friday's planned summit between Putin and Trump. A1
◆ European leaders fear that Trump will cut a deal that undermines Ukraine and puts the continent at risk. A6

◆ A federal judge denied the Justice Department's bid to release grand jury materials from its investigation into Jeffrey Epstein associate Ghislaine Maxwell. A3

◆ A Colombian senator and presidential hopeful who had warned that the country was backsliding into violence died from wounds sustained when he was shot two months ago at a campaign event. A7

◆ An Israeli airstrike killed five Al Jazeera journalists, including one of the most prominent reporting from Gaza, the network said. A7
◆ Australia will recognize a Palestinian state, Prime Minister Anthony Albanese said, joining the leaders of France, Britain and Canada in signaling they would do so. A16

◆ Finland officials filed charges against three officers of a Russia-linked oil tanker that damaged undersea cables last year. A16

CONTENTS
Markets.....	B11
Arts in Review.....	A11
Business & Finance B2-412	Opinion..... B8
Capital Account.....	A2
Personal Journal A9-10
Crossword.....	A11
Sports.....	A12
From Page One.....	A8
U.S. News.....	A2-4
Heard on Street.....	B12
World News.....	A6-716

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

Trump Orders Takeover of D.C. Police

President calls up Guard, citing fight against crime; hints he'll act in other cities

WASHINGTON—President Trump deployed National Guard troops to Washington, D.C., and placed the city's police department under federal

By Tarini Parti, Meridith McGraw and Lara Seligman

control, launching an unprecedented effort to take charge of the nation's capital. "This is Liberation Day in D.C., and we're going to take our capital back," Trump said during a news conference at the White House, where he was flanked by Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth, Attorney General Pam Bondi and other senior administration officials. Trump deployed about 800 D.C. National Guard troops to the city, and he said he would consider calling in active-duty military troops if needed.

He also suggested he might attempt to exert more federal control over other U.S. cities, mentioning Baltimore, New York and Oakland, Calif.

The president compared the homicide rate in Washington with capitals around the world, including Bogotá, Colombia. Violent crime in the city was down 35% last year from 2023, Justice Department data show, the lowest in more than 30 years. The data showed a decline in homicides, robberies, armed carjackings and assaults with a dangerous weapon.

Crime remains a problem in the city, according to local officials. D.C. has a higher per capita homicide rate than most other major U.S. cities.

"You want to have safety in the streets. You want to be able to leave your apartment or your house where you live and feel safe in going to a store to buy a newspaper or buy something, and you don't have that now," Trump said, adding he was going to "get rid of slums."

The president has escalated his attacks on the city in recent days, saying Mayor Muriel Bowser, a Democrat, hadn't done enough to control crime and homelessness. He also increased federal law-enforcement's presence in the city, deploying hundreds of federal agents throughout the district, including more than 100 from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a person familiar with the matter said.

The actions by Trump, a Republican, were met with opposition from some local officials, who accused Trump of overreaching.

Bowser called Trump's decision to exert control over D.C. "unsettling and unprecedented," and she raised concerns about the prospect of sending the military into the city. "We don't believe it's legal to use the American military against American citizens on American soil," she said during a Monday afternoon news conference. But she said the president has the authority to federalize the police.

Eleanor Holmes Norton, a

Please turn to page A4

◆ How president is taking control of D.C. police..... A4

Explosion at U.S. Steel Plant Leaves Two Dead

DEVASTATION: Firefighters at the site of a blast Monday at Clairton Coke Works, southeast of Pittsburgh, in an image taken from video. Two people were confirmed dead and 10 others were injured. For video, scan the code with the article on A3.

Nvidia CEO Pays to Ply China Trade

Jensen Huang tried diplomacy for Trump's permission to sell chips—it wasn't enough

Jensen Huang, chief executive of California-based chip designer Nvidia, worked for months behind the scenes in Washington and Beijing to protect tens of billions of dollars in future Nvidia sales from the heated U.S.-China trade rivalry.

By Lingling Wei, Raffaele Huang and Amrith Ramkumar

Huang told President Trump that restrictions on U.S. chip sales to China would backfire by pushing Chinese technology champions to achieve self-reliance. He advised the president to keep China hooked on American tech. As a sweetener, Huang said the company would invest as much $500 billion in the U.S.

Huang's argument, along with the half-trillion-dollar offer from the world's most valuable company, appeared to seal the deal.

The Trump administration decided last month to allow China to buy Nvidia's H20 artificial-intelligence chip, a surprising reversal that came shortly after Huang met with Trump. Nvidia had developed the H20 to comply with past export restrictions as a less powerful chip specially designed for China.

The news sent Nvidia's stock up 4%, pushing its market capitalization further above the record $4 trillion mark.

Beijing reciprocated by allowing a $35 billion deal involving U.S. chip-software makers that it had held up for about a year. In a previously unreported development, Chinese officials also froze an inquiry into an already-completed Nvidia deal. With both moves, China's leaders hoped Huang would keep lobbying Washington for loosened export controls.

Please turn to page A8

◆ Greg Ip: March to state capitalism... A2

Golf Carts Have Taken Over Suburbia. Cue the Resistance.

Demand for street-legal carts is surging, despite complaints; 'We all hate you'

By JOHN KEILMAN

A slow-rolling cavalry is conquering America's public roads.

Golf carts are becoming street legal in one community after another as families ditch their minivans and SUVs when they want to run a quick errand or ramble around town.

Dan Pearson bought a six-seat cart this summer after the village board he leads in the Chicago suburb of East Dundee, Ill., approved the vehicles. As he drove through downtown on a recent afternoon, pedestrians gawked and diners waved. "Dude, I love it," a man called out as Pearson cruised past. "It's fun to get out," Pearson said. "People tend to talk to people in a small little cart as opposed to a big car or truck."

But with the boom has come a backlash. Some residents of cart-friendly towns say slow drivers are clogging the streets and reckless ones are making them unsafe. They grumble about cart drivers, including tweens and young teens, speeding, swerving and treating the road like their own private parade route.

"We all hate you," a Florida motorist snapped on TikTok when slow-moving carts on a coastal road clogged traffic in both directions. "Get off your golf cart and drive a regular car."

Please turn to page A10

Freewheelin'

INSIDE

PERSONAL JOURNAL
I finally listened to my body—it saved my life. A WSJ editor's personal experience. A9

SPORTS
The star-studded New York Yankees are a $300 million disaster. A12

Big Tech Falls Short On Bay Area Housing

By NICOLE FRIEDMAN

Tech giants Meta Platforms, Google and Apple made headlines when they pledged billions of dollars to make housing more affordable in their Silicon Valley backyards.

Now, six years later, the results haven't lived up to expectations.

Some projects are going forward. The three companies have helped fund the construction of thousands of affordable units, primarily by providing loans to developers creating new housing.

Other initiatives haven't gotten off the ground. Meta's 2019 pledge included $225 million worth of land in Menlo Park, where the company is based. The California city approved in 2022 a proposed master plan to develop 59 acres including office space, retail, a hotel and 1,730 housing units. But further approvals are still needed. A representative for the project declined to give a construction timeline during a May planning commission meeting.

"There was a lot of hype that was created back in 2019, and these big numbers really felt like transformative investments" in the Bay Area, said Ben Metcalf, managing director of the Turner Center for Housing Innovation at the University of California, Berkeley. "Somehow, that hasn't worked out that way."

Despite delays, each company said its pledge amounts haven't changed.

The uneven progress underscores the challenge of navigating local land-use and permitting rules, which have been a reason for the nation's yawning housing shortage.

This is especially true in California, which has some of the most burdensome regulations

Please turn to page A2