

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXVI NO. 58

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

Last week: DJIA 45400.86 ▼ 144.02 0.32% NASDAQ 21700.39 ▲ 1.1% STOXX 600 549.21 ▼ 0.2% 10-YR. TREASURY ▲ 1 5/32, yield 4.085% OIL $61.87 ▼ $2.14 EURO $1.1720 YEN 147.40

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ A meaningful slowdown in jobs growth this summer shifted expectations for Fed interest-rate cuts throughout the rest of this year, potentially by a quarter percentage point at each of the central bank's remaining policy meetings. A1

◆ American corporations issued around $56.4 billion of investment-grade bonds through Thursday last week and about $9.6 billion in junk bonds, down from levels a year earlier, but marking the biggest week since March. B1

◆ Amazon.com will cut off its shared Prime free-shipping benefit on Oct. 1, unraveling networks of sharers with the aim of recruiting individuals as full Prime members. B1

◆ OpenAI is lending its tools and computing resources to the creation of a feature-length animated movie made largely with AI that is expected to be released in theaters globally next year. B1

◆ OPEC and its allies agreed to raise oil output further next month, despite broader concerns about a looming supply glut. B9

◆ Nearly all of Air Canada's 10,000 flight attendants rejected a tentative deal struck by their union and the carrier and the dispute over wages will go to mediation, the union and airline said. B3

◆ Horror thriller "The Conjuring: Last Rites" made its debut at the top of the chart, with $83 million in North American ticket sales over the weekend. B2

World-Wide

◆ South Korea and the U.S. reached a deal to release Korean citizens who were detained in an immigration raid at a Hyundai plant in Georgia, the office of the South Korean president said. A1, A4

◆ Japanese Prime Minister Shigeru Ishiba said he would resign, ending a short tenure after his party turned on him over a run of election defeats. A7

◆ Students returning to university are weighing the risks of defiance following the Trump administration's detention of foreign student protesters and stricter rules on campus demonstrations. A3

◆ Workers potentially eligible for the "no tax on tips" deduction are waiting for details from the Treasury Department, and for a list of exclusions that could dash their hopes. A3

◆ Pope Leo XIV officially recognized Carlo Acutis as a saint, bestowing the status on a tech-savvy millennial who died from leukemia at the age of 15 in 2006. A7

◆ A Houthi drone struck a southern Israeli airport, marking a rare hit for the Yemeni rebel group that has been attacking Israel over the war in Gaza. A6

◆ The severing of undersea cables in the Red Sea disrupted internet access in parts of Asia and the Middle East, experts said. A7

◆ Frustration with a trade deal struck between the U.S. and the EU in July is growing in Europe, with businesses halting exports and complaining about new bureaucratic hurdles. A2

JOURNAL REPORT

Investing Monthly:
Three alternatives to 60/40 portfolios. B5-6

CONTENTS Markets..... B9-10
Arts in Review..... A11 Opinion..... A15-17
Business & Finance..... B2 Personal Journal A9-10
Business News..... B3 Sports..... A12
Crossword..... A12 Technology..... B4
Heard on Street..... B10 U.S. News..... A2-5
Market Data..... B8 World News..... A6-8

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

Russia Strikes Ukraine Government Site in Kyiv

BIGGEST BLITZ: Smoke poured from the Ukrainian Cabinet of Ministers on Sunday after Russia's largest aerial bombardment of the war, which included 13 missiles and more than 800 drones. A woman and her baby were reported killed in Kyiv. A6

Seoul Says U.S. Set to Release Korean Workers Held in Raid

SEOUL—South Korea and the U.S. have reached a deal to release Korean citizens who were detained last Thursday in a large-scale immigration raid

By Jiyoung Sohn,
Timothy W. Martin and Sharon Terlep

at a Hyundai Motor plant in Georgia, the office of the South Korean president said.

Some administrative procedures remain, but once they are cleared, a chartered plane will be sent to the U.S. to bring the South Korean citizens home, Kang Hoon-sik, chief of staff of South Korea's presidential office, said on Sunday. He didn't elaborate on the timing nor the nature of the deal with the U.S.

The State Department doesn't comment on private diplomatic communications, a spokesman said.

One unresolved point is whether the detained South Koreans are allowed to leave voluntarily or be deported—the latter move often triggering a multiyear entry ban to America, officials from Seoul and Washington said. As of Friday, the U.S. had said no criminal charges had been filed.

Seoul's statement of a deal comes days after U.S. law-enforcement officials carried out their largest-ever single-site immigration raid at the construction site of an electric-vehicle battery factory near Savannah, Ga. The factory is a joint venture between Hyundai and fellow South Korean firm

LG Energy Solution.

On Sunday, U.S. border czar Tom Homan said on CNN that these workplace raids would continue. "You're going to see a lot more worksite enforcement operations," he said. "It's a crime to knowingly hire an illegal alien."

President Trump on Sunday evening said foreign companies' investments in the U.S.

Please turn to page A4

◆ Raid rattles fast-growing Georgia region..... A4

Soft Data On Jobs Stir Hope For Faster Rate Cuts

Traders raise bets on bolder Fed action, but inflation risks remain a wild card

By Nick Timiraos
and Jack Pitcher

The August employment report settled whether the Federal Reserve would resume rate cuts in two weeks—it will. Now comes the harder question: How far and how fast will officials move to keep cutting after September?

A meaningful slowdown in job growth this summer has shifted expectations for cuts throughout the rest of the year. Rather than cutting at every other meeting as previously anticipated, officials are likely to debate whether to continue with consecutive cuts of a quarter percentage point through their remaining meetings this year. Officials meet again in October and December.

Markets raised their bets on rate cuts Friday. Yields on the 2-year Treasury note, which closely track expected Fed moves, settled at 3.506%, its lowest level in three years. Traders see a roughly 75% chance the Fed will make the equivalent of a quarter-point rate cut at each of its three remaining policy meetings this year, according to CME Group.

"It certainly seems possible that they'll just cut at the next

Please turn to page A2

◆ Companies kick off a deluge of bond sales B1

Alcaraz Secures The Title

Carlos Alcaraz, right, clinched his second U.S. Open men's singles title on Sunday, over rival Jannik Sinner. A day earlier, Aryna Sabalenka beat Amanda Anisimova of the U.S. to win the women's title. A12, WSJ.com

KIRSTY WIGLESWORTH/ASSOCIATED PRESS

RFK Jr. Is Testing Trump's Support

Shortly before President Trump secured another White House term, he pledged to supporters to let Robert F. Ken-

By Sabrina Siddiqui,
Liz Essley Whyte
and Lindsay Wise

nedly Jr. "go wild" on health, medicine and food if elected. Nearly a year later, Kennedy is testing just how far Trump will let him go.

The president so far has stood by his health and human services secretary as Kennedy's efforts to dismantle public-health institutions and overhaul vaccine policy took center stage at a fiery hearing on Capitol Hill last week.

"I like the fact that he's different," Trump said after Kennedy was admonished by Republicans and Democrats alike over firing the director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and effectively limiting access to the Covid-19 vaccine, as well as concerns over possible changes to routine childhood vaccinations.

While acknowledging he hadn't seen the hearing, Trump said Kennedy "means very well" and praised what he heard about his performance.

Please turn to page A5

Ultrawealthy Pile Money Into Longer Lifespans

How much would you invest in the possibility of living to 150 or beyond? Or having 20 extra healthy years?

By Shane Shifflett,
Amy Dockser Marcus
and Alex Janin

For the ultrawealthy, it's more than $5 billion over the past 2½ decades, according to a Wall Street Journal analysis of longevity investment deals in PitchBook, public company statements and regulatory filings.

Silicon Valley giants Peter Thiel, Sam Altman, Yuri Milner and Marc Andreessen are among the boldface names behind the influx of money in the longevity industry. Thiel's quest for longer life spans nearly a dozen companies—some of which were funded by his venture firm and others by a nonprofit foundation he backed—that raised more than $700 million, according to the Journal's analysis.

They and other wealthy investors have helped push what was once something of an academic backwater into the cultural mainstream.

Many companies ultimately fail, but the ultrawealthy and other enthusiasts are following the money and the science to decide where to invest and what to take.

These companies are part of a constellation of more than 200 startups and nonprofits

Please turn to page A10

Researchers Track World's Biggest Animal Migration

African trek, with six million antelope, is virtually unknown to outsiders

By Michael M. Phillips

GADIANG, South Sudan—Deep in the hinterlands of this East African country is one of the greatest natural events you'll never see.

Six million antelope swarm across an area the size of Illinois, a mass movement of mammals triple the size of the Serengeti wildebeest trek, the go-to migration for TV nature shows. The animals storm through sparse forests and open savannah, trickles of antelope merging to become streams, streams swelling and spreading until the landscape is filled with thundering rivers of white-eared kob, tiang, Mongalla gazelle and Bohor reedbuck. A single herd can number 100,000 antelope, or more.

"This is the greatest migration of large fauna in the world, including the oceans," says renowned naturalist Mike Fay, who is conducting an antelope head-count in South Sudan. "The entire planet should be amazed that this exists."

Yet the Great Nile Migration remains virtually unknown to outsiders and posterously difficult to witness. Would-be visitors have to travel to a country that's been engulfed in on-again-off-again war for decades, and is on again. Then there's the terrain. The animals move through a landscape with virtually no roads, not even rough safari tracks, and are easily viewable only from helicopters or slow-flying ultralight aircraft.

African Parks, the Johannesburg-based conservation group that manages natural areas on behalf of South Sudan's government, allowed

Please turn to page A8

INSIDE

PERSONAL JOURNAL
Parents debate whether they should be paying kids to stay off their phones. A9

BUSINESS & FINANCE
LeBron James pitches sneakers in China, countering NBA rival Steph Curry. B1

YOU FANG/GETTY IMAGES