

Chicago Tribune

QUESTIONS? CALL 1-800-TRIBUNE

TUESDAY, JANUARY 27, 2026

BREAKING NEWS AT CHICAGOTRIBUNE.COM

Judge overturns conviction in 2002 murder

Antonio Porter talks during an interview at Stateville Correctional Center in Crest Hill on Feb. 27, 2018. Porter was convicted of a 2002 murder at a dice game. ZBIGNIEW BZDAK/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Imprisoned since 2003, Antonio Porter ordered released

By Gregory Royal Pratt
Chicago Tribune

Antonio Porter will get another day in court. The 50-year old Chicagoan has been in prison since 2003, convicted in the July 2002 death of Laymond Harrison, 28, who was fatally shot during a dice game in apparent retaliation for an earlier shooting.

Porter denied killing Harrison, and the witnesses called by prosecutors at the trial recanted their earlier statements to police, but a jury found him guilty. In 2023, Porter filed a motion seeking to have his murder conviction tossed out, arguing in part that a Chicago police officer who testified at Porter's trial was not credible because of past misconduct allegations. A judge once ripped that officer for providing "garbage" testimony in another case, the motion states.

On Thursday, Cook County Judge Tyria Walton vacated Porter's conviction and ordered a new trial after finding that the officer's history of alleged misconduct "undermines the confidence of the earlier verdict rendered in Mr. Porter's original trial."

Cook County prosecutors now must decide whether they will attempt to try Porter again or dismiss the case. At a bond hearing Monday, Porter was ordered

Turn to Porter, Page 4

Mayor Frey: Agents will exit

Trump agrees to reduction of immigration force in Minneapolis

By Steve Karnowski
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Minneapolis Mayor Jacob Frey said Monday that some federal immigration enforcement officers would soon leave his city following a conversation with President Donald Trump, who praised the discussion that declared that "lots of progress is being made."

Frey said he asked Trump in a phone call to end the immigration enforcement surge and that Trump agreed the present situation cannot continue.

The mayor said some agents will begin leaving Tuesday. Frey said he would keep pushing for others involved in Operation Metro Surge to go.

Among the agents who are expected to depart was senior Border Patrol commander Greg Bovino, a person familiar with the matter told The Associated Press.

Trump dispatched his border czar, Tom Homan, to Minnesota to take charge of much the administration's immigration enforcement efforts.

Bovino has been at the center of the administration's aggressive enforcement surge in cities nationwide. His departure marks a significant public shift in federal law enforcement posture amid mounting outrage over the fatal shooting Saturday of 37-year-old ICU nurse Alex Pretti by Border Patrol agents.

Trump posted on social media that Homan will report directly to him.

The person familiar with the matter was not authorized to publicly discuss details of the

Turn to Minneapolis, Page 9

New SNAP work requirements set to go into effect

Officials urged those on SNAP to notify the Illinois Department of Human Services of their work status or eligible exemptions so as not to risk losing benefits. Chicagoland, Page 3

Federal funding cuts for Chicago Harbor Lock

Cuts are expected to bemoan more than 90% this year after an effort by Illinois lawmakers to secure more money for the busy stop lock and dam failed. Business

BRIAN CASSELLA/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Call of the lake

A person explores the end of North Avenue Beach with pancake ice at sunrise with temperatures around zero degrees Monday in Chicago.

Attorney Christopher Parente, left, speaks to reporters at the Dirksen U.S. Courthouse in Chicago on Nov. 20 as his client Marimar Martinez, center, and law partner Damon Cheronis, right, look on after federal prosecutors abruptly moved to dismiss all charges against Martinez. TERRENCE ANTONIO JAMES/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Lawyer for woman shot by Border Patrol in Chicago seeking bodycam footage

By Jason Meisner
Chicago Tribune

Citing the recent "executions" of two U.S. citizens by immigration agents in Minneapolis, a lawyer for a Chicago woman shot by a Border Patrol agent in October asked a judge on Monday to allow bodycam footage and other evidence from the incident to be made public.

In his eight-page motion, attorney Christopher Parente wrote that despite all charges being dropped against his client, Marimar Martinez, in November, the government "continues to prosecute her character in the court of public opinion," with labels of "domestic terrorist" and other falsehoods still visible on official government websites and social media.

Parente also said two U.S. citizens by immigration officers this month in Minnesota — Renee Good and Alex Pretti — were "engaged in similar peaceful protests as Ms. Martinez at the time of their killings."

Releasing the body-worn camera footage and other reports in Martinez's case

Turn to Bodycam, Page 2

Childhood vaccine schedule released

American Academy of Pediatrics at odds with federal recommendations

By Lisa Schencker
Chicago Tribune

As an alternative to new federal vaccine recommendations, the Itasca-based American Academy of Pediatrics released its own childhood vaccine schedule Monday with the backing of a dozen of the nation's most prominent medical groups and associations.

The American Academy of Pediatrics' vaccine schedule differs from the new federal one in a number of ways, largely sticking to previous recommendations. For example, it continues to recommend routine flu vaccinations, hepatitis B vaccinations for all infants and COVID-19 vaccines for all children from the ages of 6 to 23 months, whereas the new federal schedule does not, instead leaving it up to parents and doctors whether to vaccinate individual children, in most cases.

"The recommendations from the CDC, I think, are confusing

Turn to Vaccine, Page 2

