

The Enigmatic Therapy That Saved My Life

REVIEW

WSJ

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL WEEKEND

DOW JONES | News Corp | *****

SATURDAY/SUNDAY, MAY 30 - 31, 2026 - VOL. CCLXXXVII NO. 125

WSJ.com | ★★★★★ $6.00

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ Credit-card delinquencies hit 13.12% in the first quarter, the most since after the 2008 financial crisis, according to data from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. A1

◆ BP's ousted chairman clashed with a director this year over the handling of talks about a potential deal, a sign of tensions months before Albert Manifold's abrupt dismissal this past week. B9

◆ Universal Music Group rejected Bill Ackman-led Pershing Square Capital's bid to buy the world's largest music company for about $65 billion. B9

◆ A sharp drop in oil prices lifted the Dow 0.7%, above 51000 for the first time, while the S&P 500 and Nasdaq both rose 0.2%. All three indexes set records. B10

◆ Buyout firm CVC Capital will buy the food-ingredients unit of International Flavors & Fragrances for $4.3 billion, including debt. B9

◆ Unilever plans to build a $270 million research center in New Haven, Conn. B9

◆ BYD unveiled an autonomous-driving chip, as the Chinese automaker seeks a new growth driver. B9

◆ Big banks' profit engines are humming along even as geopolitics keep threatening to gum up the works. B10

Worldwide

◆ Trump's top aides have discussed whether he should kill the administration's nearly $1.8 billion "anti-weaponization" fund in exchange for getting immigration enforcement funding passed next month, according to people familiar with the matter. A1

◆ A federal judge directed the administration to pause efforts to set up the fund. A4

◆ A Russian drone crashed into an apartment building in NATO-member Romania, raising tensions with the alliance and stoking fears that Russia will expand the war beyond Ukraine. A1

◆ The U.N. is going broke as the U.S. and China vie for control by withholding funds. A1

◆ A federal judge ruled that Trump's name must be removed from the Kennedy Center in the capital. A3

◆ The U.A.E. has carried out dozens of airstrikes against Iran beginning in the early days of the war and continuing through the day after the ceasefire was announced. A6

◆ A Kenyan high court put a temporary hold on the Trump administration's plan to set up an Ebola quarantine-and-treatment facility in the African country for Americans. A8

◆ Beijing threatened to launch trade probes against the EU if the bloc pushes ahead with a proposal to curb imports of heavily subsidized foreign products. A8

CONTENTS
Obituaries.....	C6
Books.....	C7-12
Business & Finance.....	B9
Design & Decor.....	D3
Gear & Gadgets.....	D6
Heard on Street.....	B12
Markets.....	B10
Opinion.....	A11-13
Sports.....	A14
Style & Fashion.....	D2,4
Travel.....	D8-9
U.S. News.....	A2-4
World News.....	A6-9

Rocket Explosion Is Major Blow for Bezos

SETBACK: Jeff Bezos' Blue Origin was assessing the damage Friday, a day after a rocket exploded in a ball of fire during a test on the launchpad in Cape Canaveral, Fla. No one was hurt in the blast, but the failure threatens to delay future missions. To watch a video, scan the code with the article on A3.

Americans Strain to Pay Down $1.25 Trillion Credit-Card Bill

By DAN FROSCH |

After working all day as an operations director at a busy New England hospital, Catherine Clarke would lie awake at night wondering where she went wrong.

Despite her $194,000 salary, Clarke's Chase Sapphire credit-card balance had crept up to $15,000. She could afford the $572 monthly minimum, but with a 26% interest rate, it barely made a dent.

Like many Americans, Clarke, who is 42 years old, was pushed to her financial limit by the one-two punch of inflation and the highest interest rates in decades. She avoided going out with friends to save money, and considered taking a second job as a receptionist at her gym. She imagined something terrible befalling her, and her parents discovering her mounting credit-card bills.

"It felt very similar to a struggle with weight," Clarke said. "It doesn't happen overnight. It happens slowly, and then suddenly, you're like 'Oh, crap, my pants don't fit.'"

In the first quarter of this year, the percentage of credit-card balances that were at least 90 days delinquent rose to 13.12%, according to data released in May by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

That's the highest level in 15 years, and the most since the period following the 2008 financial crisis.

America's total credit-card balance stood at $1.25 trillion in the first quarter, according to the New York Fed, up from $1.18 trillion in that quarter last year. That's the highest first-quarter balance since the New York Fed began recording the measurement in 1999.

Please turn to page A10

U.N. Is Going Broke; U.S., China Get Blame

By JAMES T. AREDDY

The United Nations is going broke as the U.S. and China withhold payments in a jostle for control.

Washington has failed to pay billions of dollars owed to the institution and exited dozens of its programs and agencies, including the World Health Organization, to combat what President Trump describes as wasteful spending and bad policymaking. The U.S. is more than $4 billion in arrears to the U.N.

China has compounded the U.N.'s liquidity crisis by slow-walking its own payments, even as Beijing declares itself the international body's leading defender and, in a jab at the U.S., the "de facto No. 1 financial contributor." Beijing owes the U.N. $455 million after it injected almost $850 million this week into the institution during a visit by Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi.

The U.N. relies on U.S. and Chinese money for 42% of its basic funding.

Secretary-General António Guterres has warned that the U.N. is in a "race to bankruptcy" and cited a "very real prospect of the financial collapse of our organization." On the current trajectory, the U.N. said it would be out of cash by mid-August—when the process of picking a successor to

Please turn to page A8

Oil Futures Drop Sharply

Benchmark crude prices saw biggest fall since 2020. B10

A Russian Drone Crashes in Romania, Fuels NATO Tensions

By THOMAS GROVE

A Russian drone crashed into an apartment building Friday in NATO member Romania, raising tensions with the alliance and stoking fears that Russia will attempt to expand its war beyond Ukraine.

Romania scrambled jet fighters in an attempt to intercept the drone after it crossed the border from Ukraine into the southeastern city of Galati, where it set the roof of the apartment building on fire and injured several people, authorities said.

The drone incursion raised alarms among North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies and fed European fears that Russia is working to escalate its confrontation with the alliance over its aid to Ukraine as Moscow struggles on the battlefield.

"Russia's reckless behavior is a danger to us all," said NATO Secretary-General Mark Rutte. "They continue to target civilians and civilian infrastructure across Ukraine. And last night showed yet again that the implications of their illegal war of aggression don't

Please turn to page A6

EXCHANGE

HOT STREAK
The Arsenal owner explains how to build winning teams. B1

This Summer's Hottest Job: European Ambassador for Ranch

* * *

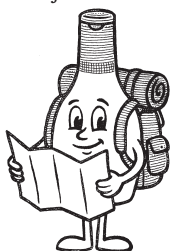

Applicants went to extremes to land a role promoting Hidden Valley's dressing abroad

By NATASHA KHAN

When Hidden Valley Ranch advertised for a summer job hiring "ranchbassadors" for Europe, the company knew the role would attract interest.

After all, the position involves traveling around Europe promoting the creamy condiment. The main responsibility: to spread "The Flavor of America" abroad.

But it turns out that for

Cream of the crop

many Americans, preaching the gospel of ranch isn't a job. It's a calling.

The company fielded more than 6,000 applicants, 70 times as many as a typical job listing. Aspiring ranchbassadors attached all manner of supplemental material, including pictures of their faces on ranch bottles. Boxes with scrapbooks and pitch decks started arriving in the hiring manager's office.

Please turn to page A10

Robotaxis Have Arrived, Along With the Backlash

By SEAN McLAIN

This was supposed to be the year that robotaxis hit Main Street across the U.S., as companies like Alphabet's Waymo, Tesla and Amazon.com's Zoox launch AI-powered autonomous rides in dozens of cities.

But as hundreds of robot cars collide with humans, both literally and figuratively, tensions are rising. The problems cropping up in police reports and viral social-media posts range from the concerning to the comic.

Over Mother's Day weekend, Andy Milheizer's quiet Atlanta cul-de-sac was overrun with empty Waymo vehicles.

Her neighbors put up a barricade to block the vehicles. The next day, the robotaxis stopped at the barrier one after another, boxing each other in for around two hours.

"We started realizing that there might be a problem here," said Milheizer, a 48-year-old civil engineer and mother.

The passengers in two Waymo vehicles in Atlanta recently were in a less-humorous predicament. Their taxis drove into flooded streets during a storm and became stranded.

Now, criticism is mounting from drivers, law enforcement and local governments from California to New York—and

Please turn to page A2