Dubai eases visa rules for new property investors

MOVE TIGHTENS THRESHOLDS FOR CO-OWNED ASSETS

Dubai has eased requirements for its two-year property-linked residency visa, removing the minimum property value for sole owners while introducing a Dh400,000 minimum share per investor for jointly-owned assets.

The update, issued by the Dubai Land Department (DLD) through its Cube platform, replaces the earlier Dh750,000 threshold for individual buyers with a more flexible ownership-based approach.

Clear ownership

Under the new rules, applicants who fully own a property can qualify for the two-year investor visa regardless of the asset's value, provided ownership is clearly registered.

"If you are the sole owner of a property in Dubai, you can apply for the 2-year residence visa with no minimum property value requirement," the

BOOST FOR UAE'S SUPPLY CHAIN RESILIENCE

His Highness Sheikh Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Vice-President and Prime Minister of the UAE and Ruler of Dubai, has approved the launch of a National Programme to Strengthen Supply Chain Resilience in the UAE. The programme seeks to safeguard the UAE's long-term adaptability and sustainability by ensuring reliable access to essential goods, including food, medical supplies and industrial products, amid evolving global challenges.

Adopting an integrated approach, the initiative will focus on diversifying import sources, boosting local manufacturing and agriculture in partnership with the private sector, and expanding international collaborations for steady availability of critical supplies.

DLD Cube website updated. The shift opens the scheme to lower-budget investors and smaller property purchases that previously fell below the minimum requirement.

For jointly-owned properties, authorities have set a Dh400,000 minimum stake per investor. The rule applies even in equal ownership splits, effectively requiring each partner's share to meet the threshold independently.

"If the property is jointly owned, each owner must hold a minimum share of Dh400,000 to be eligible," the DLD Cube website further detailed.

The change is expected to influence how investors structure joint property purchases, particularly where multiple buyers combine funds to meet residency criteria.

By setting a Dh400,000 minimum share per investor for jointly-owned properties, each applicant must hold a stake above that level to qualify. Without such a floor, investors could divide ownership into smaller portions to meet residency requirements at lower individual cost. The threshold prevents that, ensuring each applicant maintains a minimum level of investment exposure.
