Iran hits US allies in Gulf region

Tehran says attacks launched following strike on wedding

By David Rising and Sammy Magdy

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Iran fired on U.S. allies in the Gulf early Wednesday following a night of American bombardment that Iranian state media says included a deadly strike on a wedding party.

The latest violence came after a monthlong lull in fighting. The six-month war has led to a spike in oil prices, roiled the global economy and posed increasing political problems for President Donald Trump’s Republican Party ahead of November midterm elections.

Fighting has escalated since the American military hit Iranian rocket launchers on an island in the Strait of Hormuz over the weekend, saying Iran was planning to use them to lay mines.

Iran retaliated by firing missiles at American bases in Jordan that were intercepted.

American military resources are stretched and political pressure in Washington is mounting, while Iran’s economy has been battered by sanctions and an American naval blockade. Iran’s currency hit another record low on Wednesday, with traders in Tehran exchanging 2.20 million rials for $1, a 10% hike from last week’s record.

Blitz tactics suit up in air

At hearing, judge skeptical of her ability to rule against the feds’ alleged militarized overreach

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

With the anniversary of Operation Midway Blitz less than a week away, the militarized tactics of immigration agents that roiled

Chicago last fall were once again front and center in federal court on Wednesday as a judge weighs the merits of a lawsuit alleging the Trump administration’s policies are unconstitutional.

But U.S. District Judge Sara

Ellis, who last November issued a landmark preliminary injunction limiting the use of force by immigration agents, seemed more skeptical this time around about her ability to police the Justice Department’s enforcement of immigration laws, particularly in light of an appellate court ruling that she’d overstepped her authority.

“Clearly under the separation of powers, I cannot manage the Executive Branch,” Ellis told the parties during the nearly four hours of arguments. “I think I’d said that before, but I’ve been told it again.”

Ellis harked back to her dramatic decision in a lawsuit brought by the Chicago Headline Club to force then-Border Patrol

HOT AND BOTHERED

People scamper across the lower level of the DuSable Lake Shore Drive bridge over the Chicago River on Wednesday as water pumped by a fire department boat flows onto them. Traffic was backed up for hours as the bridge became stuck in a raised position after swelling in unusual September heat. The fire department subsequently sprayed the bridge in an attempt to cool it. Chicagoland, Page A3

The getaway Carr

How the grandson of two Michigan legends became the quarterback tasked with ending Notre Dame’s title drought

By Colleen Kane | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Tammi Carr still remembers her son’s glare from the sideline of his friends’ game.

The Carr family had a rule. Their oldest son had to wait until seventh grade to play tackle football. They saw no need for him to take hits before then.

So CJ Carr and his friends stuck to flag football, coached by their dads, up until sixth grade, when the other parents let their sons switch to tackle.

“Just let me play!” CJ begged his parents. “Nope,” they responded. He had to wait one more year. So CJ went to his friends’ tackle football games that season and helped with the first-down sticks — sending darts with his eyes at his parents all the while — until they finally let him play the following year.

ELECTION 2026 CHICAGO SCHOOL BOARD

Hopefuls asked to sign moratorium against AI

By Finnegan Belleau
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

More than half of school board candidates have signed a pledge calling for a three-year moratorium on the use of generative AI in Chicago Public Schools.

The moratorium, included in Illinois Families for Public Schools’ “Pledge to Protect Human-Centered Education,” also asks that the new 21-member elected school board limit screen time across all grades, prohibit the collection of biometric information and appoint a chief privacy officer. The nonprofit is an advocacy group focused on improving public schools in Illinois.

By Wednesday, 24 of the 42 school board candidates on the ballot had signed the pledge, including the 15 who were endorsed by the Chicago Teachers Union, which represents the district’s more than 25,000 teachers and other school staff.

The pledge comes as school districts across the country wrestle with how to address the use of AI by students, teachers and in classrooms. Illinois Families for Public Schools wrote it over worries that new technology may harm student privacy and learning outcomes, author Charles Tocci said.

The pledge alleges that Google Gemini was planned for implementation in high school curricula this school year, but CPS said in a statement Wednesday that the “aspirational plan” was halted in May to “prioritize individual school readiness and educator training.” Gemini is the tech
