PRINCE Andrew is assisting a multi-billion-pound Middle East business venture with a former ambassador to Russia assessed as a 'threat to national security', it can be revealed.

Following revelations about the duke's friendship with an alleged Chinese spy, it has emerged that Andrew is also working with an entrepreneur who was banned from entering a Commonwealth country owing to government concerns.

It is claimed that Andrew has been using his connections to make introductions in Bahrain, the UAE, China and Africa on behalf of Waterberg Stirling, an investment vehicle looking to raise $10 billion (£8 billion).

The firm's vice-chairman, Oleg Firer, is Grenada's former ambassador to Russia. He
