40,000 flee as tanks deployed in West Bank

ISRAELI TROOPS TO REMAIN FOR A YEAR; PALESTINIANS BARRED FROM RETURNING

DUBAI

BY STEPHEN N. R.
Senior Associate Editor

A month-long sweep by Israeli forces across West Bank refugee camps has displaced 40,000 Palestinians, with Defence Minister Israel Katz declaring that troops will remain for the coming year and that those who fled will not be allowed to return.

The military operation, launched after a Gaza truce took effect, has intensified in Jenin, Tulkarem and Nur Shams, historic flashpoints of Palestinian militancy.

For the first time since 2005, Israel has deployed tanks in Jenin as part of what Katz calls a war on "Islamist terrorism in Judea and Samaria" — using biblical terms for the West Bank.

"I instructed the IDF (Israeli Defence Forces) to make preparations for an extended stay in the camps that have been cleared, spanning the coming year, and we shall not allow the return of residents or for terrorism to flourish anew," he added.

Israel will prevent operations in the camps by UNRWA,

Katz added. Armoured bulldozers have demolished homes, upturned roads, and cut water supplies, with entire streets flattened to open access routes into the densely packed camps.

51 killed

According to the United Nations, the Israeli offensive has killed at least 51 Palestinians, including seven children, while the Palestinian health ministry reports 39 deaths.

Three Israeli soldiers have also been killed. Israel's military says it is targeting gunmen and their facilities to prevent imminent attacks.

The crackdown intensified after three empty buses exploded in Tel Aviv on February 20 in what police suspect was a failed Palestinian bombing attempt.

In response, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu visited Tulkarem — a rare move for an Israeli leader — ordering the army to "step up operations". His visit was met with Palestinian condemnation.

"We are flattening entire streets that terrorists use, and their homes. We are eliminating terrorists, commanders," Netanyahu said.
