Motivation Is Different As Hamas, Israel Seek Cease-Fire

By JARED MALSIN
AND SUMMER SAID

Progress toward a cease-fire deal between Israel and Hamas in Gaza follows a shift in the balance of power in the Middle East after June's 12-day war between Israel and Iran.

If Israel and Hamas complete negotiations brokered by the U.S., Qatar and Egypt, they would pause the nearly two-year-old war in Gaza, free Israeli hostages in exchange for Palestinian prisoners and allow more humanitarian aid into the hunger-stricken enclave.

Arab mediators said talks over next steps toward a cease-fire deal were taking place on Sunday in both Doha and Cairo, with negotiating teams splitting up between the two capitals.

Israel's military campaign against Iran has given Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu a window to negotiate. The strikes on Iran followed more than a year in which Israel went on the offensive against Iran's allies, weakening Lebanon's Hezbollah movement and contributing to the collapse of the Assad regime in Syria.

The Iran war, which set back Tehran's nuclear program and demonstrated Israel's military superiority over its main adversary in the region, could allow Netanyahu to push back on his right-wing coalition partners, who have threatened to abandon the government if he ends the war in Gaza.

In Gaza, Hamas is under pressure from Palestinians demanding a reprieve from the crisis after more than three months in which Israel has restricted food and other supplies allowed into the enclave. Israel has also killed a series of top Hamas leaders in recent

Trump's Trade Deals Face Key Week

By BRIAN SCHWARTZ
AND GAVIN BADE

President Trump faces a crucial week for reaching trade deals before new tariffs are scheduled to hit dozens of countries starting Wednesday. He has scored several big wins in the past two weeks, including signing his tax and domestic policy megabill and helping broker a cease-fire between Israel and Iran. U.S. job growth in June was steadier than economists had expected, signaling strength in the economy.

Trump will attempt to build on his momentum by tackling a series of trade agreements that have proved elusive ahead of his rapidly approaching deadline. Among other sticking points, the president has refused to budge on his industry-specific tariffs, including those targeting foreign automobile manufacturers.

Trump last Thursday said he wants to start sending letters to countries to notify them of the new tariff rates

Nobody Questioned Cops' Story Until a Dead Man's Sister Dug In

Jennifer Foley uncovered recorded calls of the deputy chief promising to deflect blame in her brother's roadside killing

By VALERIE BAUERLEIN

LORIS, S.C.—Jennifer Foley went to bed on Easter Monday feeling about as hopeless as she had been in the 18 months since her little brother was killed by a bullet in the back. Her wake-up call came at 7 a.m. the next morning.

We need to hold a prayer vigil, a friend said. When? Foley asked.

Tonight, the friend said.

Foley's grief had been unending. On Sept. 9, 2023, two armed men in a white Ram pickup chased her brother, Scott Spivey, on a highway for 9 miles. When Spivey finally stopped, he got out of his truck holding a .45 caliber pistol and yelled, Do not follow me anymore.

The two men said Spivey, a 33-year-old

Robot Umps at Wimbledon? You Cannot Be Serious

Tournament's break with tradition is not going over well; 'We want our country back'

By ANVEE BHUTANI

LONDON—Wimbledon is adored for its traditions. But a change to this year's tournament has fans crying "fault."

For the first time in the championship's 148-year history, line judges are being replaced by robots.

Instead of immaculately dressed officials—sporting their navy blazers, pin-striped shirts and white slacks—cameras are now positioned around each court to determine whether a ball is in or out.

But rather than embrace a future with fewer errors, Brits descending on the All England Club are mourning the death of the snazzy fixtures who produced great theater. John McEnroe's "You cannot be serious" outburst stemmed from a disputed line call at Wimbledon in 1981.

"We don't watch sport for the accuracy, we watch it for the drama," said Gabriel Paul. The 27-year-old Londonder's first summer job was working at Wimbledon when he was 17, and since then he's been hooked on the tournament's history. Dressed in line judge attire, he stood outside the stadium on opening day with a placard: "Don't let bots call the shots."

True to form, elements of the British media have seized on the change. A column in
