

TRAVELERS navigate LAX-it, the ride app pickup location at Los Angeles International Airport, on Monday.

Rides may cost more for travelers at LAX

Airports board will vote on whether to raise access fees for transport companies.

By Karen Garcia and Sierra Morgan

At the top of the list of things people don't like about LAX are the traffic in and out of the airport and the high cost of a ride.

Now, airport officials are proposing a plan they hope will ease one of those problems, while increasing the other.

On Tuesday morning, Los Angeles World Airports board members are expected to vote on whether to increase the access fees for private transportation companies that ferry travelers to and from Los Angeles International Airport, which includes ride app companies such as Uber and Lyft, along with taxi and limousine companies.

The thinking, according to airport officials, is to encourage riders to use the yet-to-open Automated People Mover, also known as Skylink, and to reduce vehicle traffic around the terminals.

Travelers at the airport Monday who heard about the vote were incredulous.

"We expect rides to be expensive like in every city but for it to go up even more is kind of crazy," said Jordan Conway, who was catching a ride into the city after arriving from Nashville with his friend for their annual trip to Southern California.

Their ride from the airport was projected to cost about $80.

At LAX, ride app companies including Uber and Lyft pay $4 to access the airport to pick up and drop off customers. Under Tuesday's [See LAX, A14]

Live Nation agrees to antitrust deal, changes

Terms would allow rivals to sell tickets on platform

By Cerys Davies

Live Nation has reached a settlement with the Justice Department in an antitrust case that put the entertainment giant at risk of being separated from Ticketmaster.

The ticket vendor's settlement offer was announced in a court hearing Monday, less than a week after the long-awaited trial began. With pending approval from the court, Live Nation will have to pay $280 million in damages to the suing states and allow competitors to sell tickets on its platform.

"Today marks a major step in improving the concert experience for artists and fans throughout the United States," Michael Rapino, president and chief executive of Live Nation, said in a statement. "By giving artists greater flexibility in choosing their promotional partners and ticketing strategy while also keeping the cost of a concert more affordable for fans, we are putting more power where it should be — with artists and fans."

The settlement caught Judge Arun Subramanian [See Live Nation, A10]

PARAMOUR Estate in Silver Lake is the site of the pop-up opening Wednesday.

An iconic chef, charges of abuse

Noma's L.A. pop-up will open despite protest

By Stephanie Breijo and Suhauna Hussain

Resurfaced allegations of abuse and an expected protest won't stop Noma's sold-out Los Angeles pop-up, which is set to begin on Wednesday evening. A spokesperson for the world-famous Copenhagen restaurant told The Times on Monday that plans for Noma's 16-week appearance in Silver Lake, with seats priced at $1,500 per guest, will continue as scheduled.

The pop-up, the allegations and a public apology by the restaurant's celebrity chef and co-founder René Redzepi are dividing the restaurant industry and renewing discussions of systemic imbalance and fair compensation.

A former Noma employee has for weeks posted a series of anonymous messages to

Instagram from other workers and interns recounting physical, verbal and emotional abuse sustained in years prior. These accounts were compiled and posted by Jason Ignacio White, who previously helmed Noma's fermentation lab. White also posts about his own mental health struggles during his years at the Copenhagen [See Noma, A6]

War on Iran swiftly becomes global conflict

'Short-term excursion' displaces thousands, kills hundreds, cuts off fuel, crashes markets.

By Kevin Rector and Gavin J. Quinton

Dozens of civilians, including children, wounded by an Iranian drone strike in Bahrain. France deploying warships to secure shipping commerce in the Strait of Hormuz. Australia taking heat from President Trump over its handling of the Iranian women's soccer team. Markets across Asia plunging as the price of oil surged.

Lebanon reporting half a million people displaced by fighting between Israel and Hezbollah. The U.S. State Department telling nonessential staff to get out of Saudi Arabia after attacks there killed workers from India and Bangladesh. Ukrainian anti-drone experts turning their attention from their war with Russia to help intercept Iranian attacks. The defense minister of ever-neutral Switzerland saying his country believes the U.S.-Israeli war violates international law.

In less than two weeks, the Trump administration has instigated a truly global

Video indicates U.S. hit school

Evidence mounts in a strike that killed more than 165 people in southern Iran. WORLD, A2 conflict — and with no quick and clear path to resolution, despite Trump insisting to congressional Republicans gathered at his Miami resort Monday that it would be a "short-term excursion."

"Short term! Short term!" Trump said in a bullish speech about the conflict, in which he said "the world respects us right now more than they have ever respected us before."

"We're counting down the minutes until they will be gone," he said of Iran's remaining leadership, while adding that the U.S. "will not relent" until Iran is "totally and decisively defeated."

The war is not isolated to Iran, though it has certainly caused devastation there — with more than 1,300 deaths reported and toxic clouds from strikes on fuel depots hovering over Tehran, a city of some 10 million people.

The war's effects also are not limited to the Middle East, though they are widespread there — as Israel has [See Iran, A3]

A defiant signal in hard-line leader

Mojtaba Khamenei succeeds father in Iran, may be 'clouded' by seeking vengeance.

By Ramin Mostaghim and Nabih Bulos

TEHRAN — The elevation of Mojtaba Khamenei to the mantle of supreme leader brings to Iran's top job a hard-line figure who is most firmly his father's son in charting a defiant path for the country.

"Mojtaba Khamenei's elevation is not just a succession, it is a provocation — a blunt middle finger to Trump," said Ali Vaez, who heads the Iran Project at the International Crisis Group think tank, adding that his selection was "a declaration that the Islamic Republic will answer pressure with defiance, not reform."

Dismissed by President Trump as a "loser" and an "unacceptable choice," the 56-year-old Khamenei was chosen on Monday by Iran's Assembly of Experts, an 88-member clerical body, to succeed his father, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, who was killed in the first day of the U.S. and Israel's assault.

World markets reacted with alarm to Khamenei's ascension, interpreting it as a sign that the war is likely to continue beyond the "four or five weeks" Trump promised.

"It's a final act of resistance by the late Khamenei from his grave," said Ellie Geranmayeh, a senior fellow and Iran expert at the European Council of Foreign Relations. "It also sends a strong message to Trump that his bombings and threats are not delivering the regime change he seemingly wants."

"He will not only carry his father's legacy of deep distrust for the U.S. and Israel," she added, "but will also be clouded by personal vengeance given the killing of his mother, father, wife and child in the opening strikes of this war."

Khamenei will preside over an exhausted populace battered by years-long sanctions and successive confrontations with Israel and the U.S. Many of the country's 93 million people were deeply dissatisfied with the sclerotic and often corrupt rule that characterized the 36-plus-year reign of his father. In January, country-wide protests rocked the government, which deployed deadly force and [See Leader, A3]

Homeless deaths in county end decadelong rise

By Doug Smith

For the first time in the decade that homeless mortality has been tracked in Los Angeles County, fewer people have died on the streets and in shelters, the Department of Public Health reported Tuesday.

A sharp decrease in overdose deaths drove a decline of 10% in the rate of homeless deaths from all causes in 2024, the most recent year of data analyzed by the county.

But drug overdose remained the leading cause of death, followed by heart disease and vehicle accidents.

GETTING people into housing was a factor in the mortality rate's decline, an L.A. County official says.

The annual analysis found 2,208 deaths in 2024. That was 300 fewer than in the previous year but still more than six deaths a day and more than four times the mortality rate for the county as a whole.

The decrease solidified an improving trend over the prior two years, which saw only slight increases.

Before that, the rate had increased 56% over two years.

Health officials attributed the improvement to overdose prevention and [See Homeless, A14]

Rihanna's home struck by gunfire

The pop star is unhurt. A Florida woman, suspected of using AR-15-style weapon, is in custody. CALIFORNIA, B1

Paramount exec accused of fraud

A self-described "fixer" sues Jeff Shell for $150 million over an undeveloped music show. BUSINESS, A9

Weather

Partly sunny. L.A. Basin: 70/54. B6

Markets

For the latest news, go to latimes.com. A11

MARCO UGARTE Associated Press
PRESIDENT Claudia Sheinbaum of Mexico.

Sheinbaum defies U.S. on military

Mexico's president says Trump needs to address demand for drugs and flow of weapons to her country. WORLD, A4