SLEEPING ON THE JOB

11.53am Tuesday
NHS England chief Sir Jim Mackey tells MPs he'll 'pick up the pace of change'

3.23pm He's fast asleep in first class with Netflix on – as he 'runs Health Service from rail carriage'

SNOOZING in first class in the middle of the working day, this is the new head of the NHS hired to tackle 'inefficiency'.

Sir Jim Mackey vowed to MPs on

EXCLUSIVE

By Sam Greenhill and Inderdeep Bains

Tuesday he would 'pick up the pace' of reform.

Then the newly installed chief executive of NHS England went straight from the House of Commons to a first-class train carriage where he started watching Netflix before dozing off.

The Mail can reveal Sir Jim is 'running the NHS from a train carriage' as he commutes 1,200 miles a week between the office in London and his home in Northumberland.

He was put in charge of the Health

Service and its 1.5million staff and £186billion budget on March 31.

The Mail's exclusive investigation also revealed:

- Sir Jim left his laptop unlocked when he went to the toilet;
- He openly displayed documents
