

ADVERTISEMENT

IS YOUR FINANCIAL ADVISOR
A CFP PROFESSIONAL?

Putin's Secret
Dealmaker
Emerges From
The Shadows

REVIEW

WSJ

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL WEEKEND

DOW JONES | News Corp *****

SATURDAY/SUNDAY, APRIL 12 - 13, 2025 ~ VOL. CCLXXXV NO. 85

WSJ.com ★★★★★ $6.00

What's News

Business & Finance

- ◆ Countries are taking major steps to prop up their economies and prepare for a possible severe downturn as the U.S. and China keep raising the stakes in an escalating global trade war. A1, A4, A7
- ◆ Wall Street executives warned Trump's tariffs were sending the U.S. economy into the unknown and that the uncertainty was already hurting consumers and companies. A1
- ◆ One of the most tumultuous weeks in years for financial markets ended with the Dow, S&P 500 and Nasdaq up 5%, 5.7% and 7.3%, respectively, for the week. A1
- ◆ Stellantis vehicle shipments fell 9% in the first quarter, when the Jeep and Ram maker extended holiday shutdowns in January. B9
- ◆ BlackRock's assets under management edged higher to a record $11.584 trillion. B10
- ◆ Morgan Stanley said its profit jumped 26% in the first quarter. B10

ASKING THE
RIGHT QUESTION
CAN GREATLY
IMPACT YOUR FUTURE...
ESPECIALLY WHEN IT COMES TO YOUR FINANCES.

World-Wide

- ◆ Binance executives met with Treasury Department officials last month and discussed loosening U.S. government oversight on the cryptocurrency exchange, while the company was also exploring a business deal with a Trump family crypto venture, according to people familiar with the talks. A1
- ◆ The Pentagon removed the commander of an American military base in Greenland after she sent an email pushing back on comments by Vice President Vance. A2
- ◆ The Senate confirmed Lt. Gen. Dan Caine as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff following Trump's shake-up at the Pentagon. A2
- ◆ An immigration judge in Louisiana ruled that the government can deport a Columbia University student. A3
- ◆ The Trump administration pushed to advance stalled Ukraine peace talks. A8

NOONAN

Trump's climbdown
for the ages A13

JOURNAL REPORT

Golf: The indoor game is having a moment. R1-10

CONTENTS
Obituaries.....	C6
Books.....	C7-12
Business & Finance B9	Opinion..... A11-13
Sports.....	A10
Design & Decor....	D7
Style & Fashion D2-4
Food.....	D8-9
Travel.....	D5-6
Heard on Street....	B11
U.S. News.....	A2-7
Markets & Finance B10	World News..... A8-9

© 2025 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

World Takes Urgent Steps On Economy

By JASON DOUGLAS

SINGAPORE—Countries around the world are taking major steps to prop up their economies and prepare for a possible severe downturn as the U.S. and China keep raising the stakes in an escalating global trade war.

Central banks are cutting interest rates, with India, New Zealand and the Philippines leading the way this week, and more expected to follow in the coming days. South Korea's government has announced a multibillion-dollar package of emergency-support measures for the country's auto sector, including subsidies for car-makers. Several countries, including Australia, Spain and Canada are urging consumers to buy more locally, swapping imported foods and home furnishings for homegrown alternatives to support domestic companies facing tough times.

Canada is even planning to
Please turn to page A4

- ◆ Trump leaves services out of trade math..... A4
- ◆ Survey reveals consumer pessimism..... A6
- ◆ What tariffs mean for the job market..... A7

Stocks' Wild Week Ends in the Green

By RYAN DEZEMBER
AND SAM GOLDFARB

The biggest one-day rally since the financial crisis. The most volatile stretch since the Covid meltdown. A bond sell-off that sent yields surging. A steep slide in the dollar. And rattled investors driving gold to new records.

Yet one of the most tumultuous weeks in years for financial markets ended with all three major U.S. indexes up 5% or more. For Wall Street, it was a bruising run. Traders described scenes of tension, where the rapid surges and dives made it difficult to determine the prices of various investments. And the sheer violence of the moves left many exhausted and bracing for more trouble ahead.

With the Dow Jones Industrial Average ending Friday on a 600-plus-point gain, Jed
Please turn to page A6

Workers at a factory in China's Jiangsu province produce plush toys for sale in other countries.

Wall Street Sounds Alarm About Trade War's Impact

By Alexander Saeedy,
AnnaMaria Andriotis
and Gina Heeb

Wall Street executives warned on Friday that President Trump's tariffs were sending the U.S. economy into the unknown and that the uncertainty was already hurting consumers and companies alike.

Financiers came into the year excited for President Trump's tenure, expecting corporate-tax cuts and cuts in regulation to lift stocks, deal-making and corporate confidence. One quarter in, the tone is entirely different and executives are worried about tariffs and their impact, especially after the market gyrations of this month. Some economists are predicting a recession by the second half of 2025.

JPMorgan Chase's Jamie Dimon and BlackRock's Larry Fink, two of the industry's leading voices, both said the turbulence wasn't like prior financial crises.

Please turn to page A6

EXCHANGE

A WSJ GUIDE

Buying a house?
Paying for college?
How to adjust for tariff turmoil. B1

These Cops
Save Writers
From Scorn

* * *
Facebook group educates authors
on blood and guns

By JEFFREY A. TRACHTENBERG

Mystery writers have questions. These former crime fighters have answers.

A Facebook group started by a retired Milwaukee police sergeant has become a valued resource for scribes hoping to avoid amateurish mistakes, from referencing blood splatter (it's spatter) to featuring oversize whiteboards with Venn diagrams of the bad guys. (Most police don't use those visuals.)

Cops and Writers was created in 2019 after Patrick O'Donnell and his buddies observed one too many authorial
Please turn to page A9

Bessent Walks a Tightrope on Tariff Policy

Scott Bessent had Donald Trump's ear. The Treasury secretary had

By Gregory Zuckerman,
Josh Dawsey
and Alexander Saeedy

begun to encourage the president to pause his campaign on global tariffs to cut trade deals and isolate archival China. On a flight last Sunday from Mar-a-Lago to Washington, Bessent advised the president to propose an "endgame."

Trump wasn't ready. But as the week unfolded, the combination of a cratering stock market and a surprise selloff in U.S. bonds—normally a haven in times of crisis—was too much to ignore. The alarms from Wall Street could be heard in the White House, and Trump blinked.

Bessent got what he wanted, but hardly the way he wanted it.

The 62-year-old former hedge-fund manager has the thorny task of knitting together MAGA's populist economics with the more traditional conservative policies he long championed—debt reduction, tax cuts, deregulation and the like. Bessent made his name as a "macro" trader, a corner of the investing world where investors place giant bets on major economic trends. At Treasury, he is trying to pull off a macro trade of sorts on Trump's ability to remake the U.S. economy.

It is one of the riskiest and highest-stakes gambles in modern political and economic history. If Trump's trade strategy sparks a painful economic
Please turn to page A7

Binance Asks Treasury To Curb U.S. Oversight

Executives from the cryptocurrency exchange Binance met with Treasury Department officials last month and discussed loosening U.S. government oversight on the company, while it was also exploring a business deal with a Trump family crypto venture, according to people familiar with the talks.

By Angus Berwick,
Patricia Kowmann
and Rebecca Ballhaus

The Binance executives asked Treasury officials to remove a U.S. monitor that oversees the exchange's compliance with anti-money-laundering laws, some of the people said. The move would mark a first step toward returning the company, which in 2023 pleaded guilty to violating those laws, to the U.S. market.

Binance has also been in talks to list a new dollarpegged cryptocurrency from World Liberty Financial, a crypto venture backed by President Trump's family, other people familiar with the discussions said. Listing the token, known as a stablecoin, could catapult it into a huge market and potentially bring in billions in profit for the family.

Those dealings mark the progression of a growing alliance between the Trump family and Binance, the world's largest cryptocurrency exchange, which paid a record $4.3 billion fine for allowing terrorists, drug traffickers and sanctioned actors to move billions of dollars through its exchange. The Treasury talks took place after Binance had begun discussing deals with representatives of the Trump family.

For World Liberty, Binance's market power could help turn it into a serious player in the crypto industry. Binance has
Please turn to page A2

IT'S GOTTA BE A

CERTIFIED
FINANCIAL PLANNER®

FIND YOUR CFP® PROFESSIONAL AT LETSMAKEAPLAN.ORG

