UAE steps up crackdown on financial fraud

MINISTRY, DUBAI POLICE TO DETECT SUSPICIOUS TRANSACTIONS FASTER

DUBAI

BY JUSTIN VARGHESE
Your Money Editor

The Ministry of Economy and Dubai Police have joined forces to improve tracking, inspection and monitoring of suspicious financial activities, especially in sectors outside regular banking oversight like real estate, gold and jewellery trading, auditing, and business services.

The agreement aims to set up faster, more secure communication channels between the ministry and Dubai Police. This includes the exchange of confidential information about suspicious financial transactions and beneficial ownership data — in other words, who really owns or benefits from a company or transaction.

Safia Hashim Al Safi, Assistant Undersecretary for Commercial Control and Governance at the Ministry of Economy, said that the new agreement supports greater collaboration between federal and local entities to enhance oversight, improve control and monitoring of illicit activities.

According to the ministry, improving how government departments work together in sectors not traditionally covered by financial regulators will further help spot red flags earlier and act faster.

Officials said that the agreement also focuses on developing smarter detection tools to ensure long-term effectiveness.

The ministry and Dubai Police will also launch training programmes to sharpen investigative and regulatory skills and create better analytical tools for decision-making.

Maj Gen Khalil Al Mansoori, Assistant Commander-in-Chief for Criminal Investigation Affairs at Dubai Police, said: "Dubai Police is committed to supporting national efforts to counter money laundering and combat terrorism financing.

Leveraging expertise

"We aim to leverage Dubai Police's research, investigation, and financial analysis ecosystems to develop effective, proactive mechanisms for detecting suspicious activities and enhancing rapid responses."

The ministry and Dubai Police will also launch training programmes to sharpen investigative and regulatory skills, create better analytical tools for decision-making, and collaborate on awareness campaigns to prevent violations.

The new framework was signed during the World Police Summit in Dubai.

Senior Assistant Editor

Dubai's Roads and Transport Authority (RTA) has launched a comprehensive traffic improvement campaign across 40 strategic locations in the city, with works scheduled from June to September 2025. The initiative spans 22 main roads, nine school zones, five major development areas, and several internal road networks in districts including Al Khawaneej 2, and Nad Al Sheba.

Timed to coincide with the summer holiday, the upgrades are designed to minimise disruption to daily commuters.

Roads set for upgrades include Jumeirah Village Circle (towards Hessa Street), Ras Al Khor Road, Al Thanya Street, King Salman Bin Abdulaziz Al Saud Street, Al Meydan Street, Al Sa'ada Street and Al Asayel Street.

Safer school zones

RTA is also upgrading nine key school zones.

The work includes bew access roads at the Al Warqa'a 1 school complex, an additional bus entrance at GEMS School in Al Warqa'a 3, expanded access points near The English College in Al Safa 1 and a new signal-controlled pedestrian crossing on Al Seedaf Street in Al Barsha 1.

Enhancements in five major development zones include a direct route to Al Muhaisnah worker accommodations from Shaikh Mohammad Bin Zayed Road, upgrades to Al Mustaqbal Street (Brookfield) for better access to new residential areas and improved links between Al Khail Road and Al Asayel Street via Al Marabea Street.

British explorer first to walk the length of Saudi Arabia

Morrison travelled over 930km for 7 weeks

DUBAI
Gulf News Report

After seven blistering weeks, more than 930km of desert terrain, and the company of two camels named Lulu and Juicy, British adventurer Alice Morrison has completed the first stage of what may be the most ambitious trek of her life: Walking the full length of Saudi Arabia from north to south.

With the Haj season now complete and pilgrims dispersing from the holy cities, Morrison's parallel journey, quieter, slower, and laced with both pain and revelation, has inspired audiences in Saudi Arabia and beyond.

The expedition, which began in March near Jordan's border, has taken her through ancient Nabataean ruins, remote mountain passes, and the shifting sand seas of the Arabian interior.

Along the way, she has uncovered Bronze Age relics, walked with Saudi Arabia's first female wildlife rangers, and documented the fast-changing social and environmental landscape of the kingdom.

"This is one of the hardest but most rewarding journeys I've ever done," Morrison said from AlUla.
