HOW MANY MORE PUTIN SPIES IN UK?

RUSSIAN spy cells are lurking in Britain, a counter-terror chief warned as six Bulgarians were yesterday convicted of spying for the Kremlin.

The ring received orders directly from Moscow and was run from a Great Yarmouth guest house stacked with sophisticated surveillance technology.

The agents passed secrets to Russian intelligence for almost three years, spying on a US airbase in Germany and tailing opponents of Vladimir Putin – some of whom they plotted to kidnap, murder or snare in 'honeytraps'.

A fifth of British counter-terror policing is now devoted to battling a surge of state-backed threats, Scotland Yard revealed.

And the Bulgarian espionage cell lurking in suburbia was just one example of the Russian intelligence
