

My ultimate head-to-toe anti-ageing guide to look this good in your sixties

INSPIRE

STARTS PAGE 25

DEATH OF THE WORK ETHIC

With Labour at war over benefits cuts, ONE IN FOUR young people consider quitting workforce entirely

A GENERATION of young people risk languishing on benefits after one in four said they considered quitting the workforce.

Poor mental health was the

By Sam Merriman
and John-Paul Ford Rojas

most frequent reason given by under-25s for wanting to drop out of employment.

A stark report lays bare the scale of Labour's challenge as it seeks to see off opposition from its own backbenchers to slash the ballooning welfare bill and encourage adults back to work.

And the crisis looks set to deepen as one in ten workers is said to be actively considering leaving the workforce, equivalent to 4.4million Britons. This rises to a quarter of

Turn to Page 2

Snow White's VERY awkward red carpet reunion

SEE PAGE THREE